

Superconducting Niobium Films for RF Cavities,
P. DARRIULAT, CERN - Following the successful operation of niobium film cavities in LEP, a systematic study of the mechanisms responsible for RF losses in such films was undertaken. Recent results are presented and the respective merits of the film and bulk technologies are critically compared.